Shorter leash in store for local

Didsbury Review

Cats living in Didsbury's town limits may soon be on as short a leash as dogs under proposed animal control bylaw revisions eeking equality under the law between the two species

Town council gave first reading last Tuesday to revise dog and cat bylaws. The changes will not come into force until second and third readings are given.

Cat owners would have to be mindful of up to 13 new offences on top of the two already included for the feline friends in the current bylaw.

"The problem right now is cats and dogs are treated differently under the law. If a quences under the bylaw. If a cat attacks said bylaw enforcesomeone, nothing, ment officer Don Elliot.

Elliot recommended updating the bylaws to reflect the current cost of providing services as well as attacking the inequality issue.

"Of course you always hear from the dog owners about the fact that cats have no rules. This will just help that," said Elliot. The proposed cat bylaw would include just about every offence that dogs can be punished for including failing to confine a cat in heat, failing to remove defecation, cat found in a playground or sand area, cat damaging public or private property, and a cat biting or injuring a person or other ani-

Subtle differences are included in offences tailored specifically for each animal.

A cat found stalking or killing birds on public or private property would be an offence punishable a first time by a $100

The owner of a dog found on school property could still be fined while there is no similar offence for a cat.

And of course, barking would remain an offence under the revised dog bylaw while vocal cats aren't considered in the revised cat bylaw.

While dog owners may feel vindicated by the proposed cat bylaw revisions, they aren't without additional penalties as well.

The proposed schedule of penalties includes additional fines for repeat offend-

"It's to act as a deterrent really," said Elliot. "If a dog attacks right now it gets a fine. It gets the same fine if it happened six times or once. There's no deterrent to change behaviour."

It is also proposed that the courts deal with some of the more serious offences.

"Let a judge determine the severity of it.

Those really should be out of our scope," he said.

Licensing fees will be increased under the revised bylaws by $10 to $20 depend-ing on what time of year a licence is purchased and whether the animal is spayed or neutered.

Sewer, water rates rise

BY KIM DICK

Didsbury residents will see their water and sewer rates hiked at the beginning of next

Council has approved new additional charges to bank in town coffers for future water and wastewater management and pay off existing debt.

Council is looking towards a full cost utility business model that will allow them to sell water and sewer services to outside cuswithout negatively impacting Didsbury residents.

"It is necessary and we should have started it perhaps sooner, but easing into it and adding things as they come to light and explaining them to our residents is the way that we'd like to do it," said Mayor Dorothy Moore. "If it makes sense...they agree in doing what's right and paying for what they use

Sewer consumers will now be charged a base fee of $13 a month to pay down money already borrowed for the current systems.

A new $3 a month additional charge will appear on water bills to fund future anticipat ed renewal and replacement projects.

The $6 administration fee per bill will remain in effect.

Council threw around numbers concerning the sewer infrastructure renewal plan rate last week as some were concerned about hitting residents with increased rates all at once.

Moore says the rate hikes are necessary and needed.

"If we look at sustainability you have to provide for the infrastructure that you are going to need and it has to be an ongoing invest-ment," said Moore.

The mayor says that they haven't always done that in the past and all Didsbury residents will have to acclimatize to the increasing cost of maintaining town infrastructure.

"I don't want to give taxpayers a jolt," said Moore. "I don't like it to be a sharp impact, they understand that these things have to be paid for and we all need to gradually get accustomed to the cost of things in the future."

Moore says in the future they may be looking at an Epcor or Enmax utility model.

Didsbury Mobile Home Park owners are looking to share costs with the Town of Didsbury to instal water metres at the Skovmose Darren spoke to council last Tuesday about the benefits of water conservation they have found in Olds Mobile Home Park after installing individual water metres there.

"The feeling I getmting from talking to public works...they think, favour of the consermethod vation installing water metres, said "We've Skovmose done it in Olds and the first few months we tracked it there and have seen up to 25 per cent savings.

Council is being asked to share the cost on 103 water metres as well as partnership in installing radio remote heads on those metres.

Skovmose has found that residents reduce consumption considerably when individually metred.

Rough numbers brought forward to council show that the Didsbury Mobile Home Park uses anywhere from 300,000 to 350,000 gallons month.

If the situation is similar to the savings they have seen in Olds, Skocmose could see that number going back to 250,000 roughly gallons month.

Council will need more information at its fingertips before going ahead and making an informed decision.

Local oil company's financial struggles threaten viability

BY JODI STYNER

For The Review

JED Oil is struggling to keep its new doors in Didsbury open, with first quarter results showing big losse

The company moved its office from downtown Calgary to Didsbury back in February, after 2006 fourth quarter results forced administration to cut back on spending.

Now its 2007 first quarter results report a revenue decrease of 28 per cent, and an average production decrease mirroring that at 27 per cent.

The report states that due to the net losses, the company will require addi-tional funds to maintain operations, and discharge liabilities as they become due.

"These conditions raise substantial doubt about the company's ability to continue as an ongoing concern," the report

Early into this second quarter, JED reached a settlement to terminate five drilling contracts

This, coupled with administrative cutbacks and asset sales, should help with second quarter results, according to JED CEO Tom Jacobsen.

But the company isn't out of the woods yet, said JED president James Rundell.

Rundell said the government's decision to tax income trusts in October 2006 has been a big blow to the company.
"Most of the income trusts were generating probably 90 per cent of the money coming into the oil field, and then it trickdown into the smaller E&Ps like us,' said Rundell.

"When they threw the tax on, it dried up investors; they just got mad and left because they changed the rules...and that is what has really stopped us dead in our Ongoing royalty review discussions are another factor in the companY'S uncertain future, added Rundell.

"They don't do reviews and then do cutbacks, they usually add and the investors, again, are upset over that," he

While bitumen production is picking up, putting more money in the pockets of big investors, Rundell said the smaller exploration and production companies like JED will take a hit this summer. He anticipates only about 40 per cent of the rigs will be utilized and that will lead to "massive unemployment" for both oil patch workers and manufacturers.

"It is not going to be a nice summer, it's not going to be a nice fall," said Rundell.

"A lot of the big drilling contractors aren't expecting a push until January again. Long term, Rundell said his company's ability to stay afloat will depend on how far government bureaucracy goes in terms of taxation, and now environmental regulations.

"They've almost killed the goose that laid the golden egg here," he said. "And the thing is, there's other countries that give you better deals. You just offshore, and the guys that can't go offshore will just kind of putz along and see what they can get done, and all the service companies will get whittled down to half the size they are now, and then it'll be questionable whether or not they can

EDITORIAL&OPINION

Your letters Don't stop at smoking ban

Can Premier Ed Stelmach take the credit for promoting anti-smoking legislation in bars and public

He had long refused to clarify his personal opinion on an issue that had long been controversial, whereas he should have been a strong advocate on the issue all along.

Second-hand smoke has been linked to the deaths of more than 1,000 Canadians every year.

Canadian Cancer Society reports cigarette smoking causes 30 per cent of all cancers and more than 89.5 per cent of lung cancers.

After all the controversy over smoking bans, smok rs seem to have finally come to accept the concept that non-smokers have the right to refuse to have to share a clean air space.

By the same token, those who do not drink and drive should have every right to drive in safety on our highways, not being jeopardized by having to share the road with intoxicated drivers. Judges have ent out a message that drunk driving is a trivial offence, even when a death is involved. Little wonder there is so much slaughter on our highways. Impaired driving is the leading cause of traffic deaths in Alberta (Calgary Police Service).

The sobering fact is that Alberta has the highest per capita consumption of alcohol in Canada (Parkland Industries). Little wonder — privatization of booze by Klein tripled the number of outlets, bar hours were extended to 4:30 a.m., and nude bar performances flourished.

Overcome with greed, Alberta takes in almost $2 million net from booze sales per day (Annual report, AB G&L).

It costs taxpayers $10 for every one of those dollars to pick up the pieces for the increase in crime, jails, marital breakup, welfare costs, health care, etc. (B.C. study). Alcohol is a factor in 70 per cent of murders (FBI, 1990) and Edmonton remains the murder capital of Canada.

Seems that if the Conservatives can protect non smokers in bars and public places, they should be able to help protect drivers on our public highways

Petitioner stands up for abused animals everywhere

Dear Editor: In response to Mr. E.V. Peters' letter, "More attention needed for human tragedies".

My name is Tamara Chaney, the founder of the Stop Animal Cruelty Petition.' I'd like to start by saying it is truly tiresome continuously reading articles comparing the worst recorded animal abuse case in Canada's history (Daisy Duke), to abortion, rape, human to human abuse and now canine to human abuse, which I'd like to point out, have no relation each other in any way. It's like comparing apples to oranges; it makes absolutely no sense

I'd like you to know the reason I started my petition. Canada's Animal Welfare Legislation has not been updated since 1892; that's right, 115 years. There are absolutely no laws that offer effective protection for our animals, which is entirely unacceptable. Our current animal welfare laws are riddled with loopholes that continuously allow animal abusers to get off with a slap on the hand. There are thousands of laws to protect human beings, yet not one which offers substantial protection for our animals.

I am tired of people criticizing me for standing up for something I believe in, simply due to the fact I am fighting for arimals and not humans. If I'm not mistaken, we all have the same maker, (dogs, cats, whales, mice, bears, humans, worms...). All living things are 'here' because of our maker. I believe every living thing we co-exist with deserves to be treated with respect and understanding, nothing less. However, with our ever-failing society, people's complete lack of respect for anything, not even another life, it appears my beliefs are nothing more than wishful thinking.

You know, I have not seen one of my criticizers taking a stand for what they are passionate about, taking the risk of putting their name across Canada and taking physical action to change Canada's lacking laws. Mr. Peters, you seem to feel strongly about canine attacks on children. I'd like to know if you've ever attended any canine/child attack court cases to show your support for the victim? Have you ever thought about starting a campaign informing the public of the risks involved in leaving children unattended with canines? Have you ever taken a public stance for anything you believe in? I'm guessing, NO. When you actually take a public stance on something you are passionate about, only then will you have the right to downsize some else's efforts to stand up for what they believe in.

Are you aware of the PROVEN link between animal abusers and serial killers? Let me open your eyes. ALL serial killers started their reign of terror by torturing animals. Perhaps you should read some books about Ted Bundy or Charles Manson; maybe do some research on the internet. After doing so, I hope you would have the sense to understand the very great need to stop these sociopathic monsters at the animal abuse level before they move on to humans, perhaps one of your family members. Now do you understand why people stand up and speak out against animal abuse, why animal torture strikes such upset and action?

In regards to your illogical comment on dog/child attacks: "Oh, sorry...it's only a human being...poor dog...it wasn't the dog's fault! Sound familiar", I'd like you to keep reading.

Finding a canine that attacks for NO REASON is like finding a needle in a haystack, so no, in the majority of cases of socalled 'attacks', it is not the dog's fault. If you would do some research on these attacks, the child has been left unattended with the dog by their guardian, some-thing a responsible person would not do. Canines naturally have something that is called 'prey drive.' All breeds of dogs have some level of prey drive, from a toy poodle to a Great Dane If something moves, it's prey, like it or not, that is canine logic. People need to be aware of this and take the responsible steps not to set their pets up for failure. As I am sure you are aware, if a child has not been taught to treat animals kind-ly, they tend to pull ears and tails, and try dragging the animal around. I don't know about you, but I wouldn't enjoy someone treating me that way, Ninety-eight per cent of canine attacks are caused by human error, yet when an animal acts with its natural instinct, it is immediately quarantined and ultimately euthanized. I do strongly feel that if the canine which 'attacked' a child is in fact deemed 'mad', then the DOG SHOULD BE EUTHA NIZED. However, the fact is that countless canines who nave always been loyal and loving companions are needlessly being euthanized due to a human's ignorant actions. Absolutely, dog/child attacks are horri-ble, and I most certainly cannot imagine the emo tional scars the victim would suffer throughout life, but when you get right down to it, the MAJORITY of attacks would not have happened if the child's supervising. You are kidding me when you say that the paper has been 'fixated' on the Haskett/animal cruelty issue, right? Informing our town's residents and our fellow Canadians of an individual who is admittedly responsible for Canada's worst recorded case of ani mal abuse, what is the prob-lem with that? Would you prefer the media stick their heads in the sand and pretend a self-proclaimed animal abuser does not reside among us? The media, via TV, radio, internet and newspapers is responsible for alerting us of criminals and the crimes they commit against our fellow human beings and animals. The media gives us the opportunity to curb our ignorance in relation to the state of our ever-failing society

guardian had been there

Before writing letters to media, an individual should know the facts surrounding what they choose to convey, and stop comparing issues which have nothing to do with each other. Save yourself the embarrassment.

Alberta Museums gives local museum kudos

BY KIM DICK

The Didsbury Museum was part of a community site visit program last Thursday conducted by the Alberta Museums Association.

A handful of directors and volunteers were on hand during the visit which was conducted by Erin Collins, director of grants and Nicole Thomson, advisory assistant with the provincial non-profit organization.

"Each summer we choose a different geographic region of the province and all of the museums that are members of the association we offer them a day long site visit where we can come and tour the facility and see what they're doing and offer advice," said Collins. "If they have questions about grants, different pro-grams we run or museum practice in general...in are here to answer questions throughout the day."

"They should be so proud of what they are doing here, I mean this is really fantastic. This program is all about building partnerships and being able to connect museums to

Westerdale United Church celebrates

About 70 children and adults from the United Church in Didsbury and the surrounding area gathered together on the lawn at Westerdale Hall for Sunday worship on June 3rd to celebrate and remember the century spiritual growth, community service, and friendship that came from the tiny Westerdale United Church. This service was held to recognize the transfer of own-ership from Knox United Church to Phyllis Pihl, a longtime area resident.

Pihl, originally of the Jackson family, was present at Her great-grandfather Arthur Jackson Jr. was the original donor of the land on Highway 766 for the church in 1902. Worship has not been held at Westerdale for almost 20 years, and being unsuitable for any development now, the present United Church congregation in Didsbury felt that the land should be returned to the original family.

"It was a wonderful opportunity for the older generations present to share some memories with those of us who don't have experiences of attending church without electricity or heat. And I certainly have never driven to church by horse and buggy," said Rev. Nancy Nourse who led worship that day. Other stories were shared by folks who remember many baptisms and weddings at Westerdale United Church. Wayne Jackson recalled stories told to him by his grandfather of some of the original motor cars which didn't have fuel pumps having to back up the steep hill to the church so gravity would pull fuel toward the engine. Women chose to get out and walk up those steep hills instead," he chuckled. Westerdale was originally a Methodist Church prior to United Church union in 1925, and it served as both a mission field and a summer placement for many student ministers over the years. Even when church services were not occurring regularly, Sunday School was still offered for neighbouring children. The church became a central place in the area and soon facilities for wagons and horse teams were built to accommodate them. A memorial ball team originated in Westerdale after World War I, and the ball diamonds are still in use across from the little church today. The original organ donated in the 1930s by Calgary lawyer R.B. Bennett (who later became Prime Minister of Canada) was stolen in 1979 along with a historically valuable guest book. Soon another organ was donated and the ministry of music resumed. With thanks to Rev. Martin Lynas and his successor Rev. Doug Waite, the 1970s and 1980s saw worship held regularly there.

Westerdale United Church sits on a hill facing west with a view of the mountains, perhaps being one of the most beautiful locations in this part of the province. Pihl has no plans at this time for the tiny building or its land, but is grateful that the property is returned to its original heritage

New resident survey shows demographic changes

BY LEA SMALDON Didsbury Review

A recently tallied survey of new residents in Didsbury shows the town's population demographics are changing, say town officials.

Of the 160 or so new residents contacted by the Welcome Wagon and surveyed in 2006, over 80 were between the ages of 20 and 30.

The next highest number of residents under five years of age, followed closely by those aged 40 to 50.

We tend to think of Didsbury as a senior's town. But the highest numbers moving in is the ones between 20 and 30. The 70 plus was the lowest number coming in," said Luana Smith, the Town of Didsbury's executive assistant.

While not scientific, she said the new resident survey can give town officials and planners insight into future needs in the town.

impact on areas like demand for public services, transportation, and housing.

According to the new 2006 resident survey, the majority of new residents surveyed bought their own homes in town. Forty of the respondents were renting.

The survey also shows where they came from, why they moved, and what veyed (60) moved to Didsbury from Calgary. The next popular place of origin was from near Didsbury, then B.C Central Alberta, Southern Alberta, Sask., Ont., Manitoba, Edmonton, Alberta. Maritimes, Quebec, and from outside of Canada.

Nearly 80 people said they moved to Didsbury because it was a small town. Others moved here because of housing, and just over 50 new residents come because of work. Other answers includ-

News Briefs

Didsbury's annexation requests may follow Olds

Didsbury may soon follow the lead of Olds in giving notice to Mountain View County of annexation requests.

The Town of Olds is expected to formally give notice in upcoming weeks to Mountain View County of its intention to annex approximately six quarter sections of land into its boundaries.

The land, located in pieces on the northwest, south, and southwest edges of town boundaries, is needed to suffice the expected growth needs of the town over the next 20 years.

This short-term annexation would top up land banks to support anticipated population growth of 5,221 people, 2,222 new homes, and a variety of commercial, industrial, and other land uses between now and 2027.

"The town is in growth mode and this is what's deemed necessary for good planning," said Dave Dittric, a consultant working with the town and county to bring negotiations to a successful conclusion.

He said Mountain View County is prepared to work with the town to ensure that adequate land is in the town's boundary to provide for 20 years growth.

Both municipalities have agreed, in principle, to an Inter-municipal Development Plan (IDP) setting out lands identified for future short and long-term growth, as well as general planning policies.

He said Didsbury is also discussing its annexation needs, adding the town's proposal will be for more land than Olds' request.

Ag society betting on Balzac

Olds Ag Society is looking to cash in on the controversial Balzac mega development by creating a training and boarding facility in Olds for race horses competing on the track there.

Approval was given last Wednesday morning by the municipal planning commission for the Olds Agricultural Society to proceed with a new riding arena and stables on the south side of the agricultural grounds.

The new facilities are in addition to what's already on the site.

OAS general manager Tami Gardner said the primary reason for the additional buildings will be to act as a training and boarding facility for horses which will race at the proposed Balzac track between April and June, before they go to the Northlands track in Edmonton for races later in the season.

Balzac's billion-dollar development is expected to include a casino, veterinarian college, a mall the size of West Edmonton Mall, convention centre and two racetracks – a one-mile thoroughbred track and a seven-furiong strandardbred track.

Horse racing officials say the development will bring bigger purses, bigger races, and more experienced riders.

Work on the project has been stalled because a source to supply water to the development has not been finalized.

The proposed Olds facilities will provide additional revenue to the OAS, adding to the horses that are already stabled there in between May and October.

Historical roots uncovered in Didsbury Cemetery

BY LEA SMALDON Didsbury Review

Cemeteries are often overlooked as a place to find your roots but a town committee is helping area residents do just that.

For the second consec-Remembering Our Roots memorial service held at the Didsbury Cemetery Sunday.

The service was intended to reconnect people with the memories and history laid to rest there.

With over 3,000 plots and countless unmarked graves and memorials, the plot of land on the south end of town is rich in history.

Take the plot of Mr. Elias Shantz for instance. On Sept. 10, 1899, he became the first person to be buried in the town's cemetery.

Shantz was one of the first 34 people brought to Didsbury from Waterloo County, Ontario in 1894 to become the first settlers.

His was the first funeral the town had ever held. And, as meticulously noted on the family memorial column, he died at the age of 58 years, three months, and 20

Then there's Ronald A. Lyons' plot, or Ronnie as he is affectionately referred to in local histo ry books.

His parents, Bill and Mabel, came west from Elora, Ontario and settled on what was known as the Jacob Brawn homestead. They brought two sons with them - Howard and Ronnie.

Ronnie became a school eacher at Cremona and Mona schools. The Second World War broke out and Ronnie joined the air force and became an instructor.

According to local history books, he was killed Aug. 7, 1943 in a test flight at Halifax.

He's buried at the Didsbury cemetery "between his mom and his dad," according to the history book.

A walk further down the road between the cemesections uncovers both tragedy and the unexpected.

Kenneth Shantz died Nov. 26, 1902 at the age of five months.

The oldest part of the cemetery contains a number of similarily young burials from that era.

And then there's Stauffer plot.

Father, Oliver W. was born in 1871 and died in 1950. Mother, Sybilla, was born in 1874 and died in

Their epitaph reads "They gave their today for our tomorrow," a seemingly apt message for Clarence E. Reiber, or Clint as his headstone so affectionately recalls him as, was born in 1896 and died in 1983. While maybe not a settler or an air force pilot, anyone pass ing by his grave would know he was "A friend to all who knew him" as his epitaph reads.

A picture of a hockey goalie etched in Kenneth D. Papke's headstone also tells passersby something about the man born Sept. 23, 1932 and who died June 12, 2000.

William M. Smith was born in 1888 and died in 1968. He was a Freemason as evidenced by the etching on his headstone.

Other headstones tell the tale of how this country was settled.

William M. McCulloch was born in 1875 in Scotland. Emigration took him to the States and finally to Didsbury where he was laid to rest in 1954 with his wife Jessie Carson who had died and was buried there in 1940.

By the mid 1980s volunteers had counted over burials

Last year's memorial service took on special significance. So-called significance. So-called Baby Jane was laid to rest after 93 years of being lost in a throng of names.

The little girl, in her very short life, sent a town stirring.

Nothing seemed out of the ordinary on that May day in 1913.

Otto Krueger headed out to check on his cattle. Everything seemed to be in order, but then he glanced something white out of the corner of his eye. When he walked over to investigate, he found something no one could've prepared themselves for.

was lying on white flour sack, her little newborn body badly decomposed after two weeks in the elements, and she had what looked like a rope around her neck, possibly the umbilical cord.

It seemed everyone in town had a theory about Baby Jane how ended up in that field, but the case remained unsolved.

It seemed that Baby Jane would be lost forever in the minds of people in this community she was born in, but who never knew her.

The baby was buried in the Didsbury cemetery, but her grave was never marked, so all that remained was a generic descriptor in a cemetery burial list: "Baby found on Prairie".

But Baby Jane grabbed the attention of some town shop employees last year when they read the descriptor and decided she deserved something

Jakubowski Rick stepped up to make Baby Jane a headstone, using cement and "glass eye" stones (used in tanks) for materials. fish

Now this Sunday, June 11, Baby Jane was finally given a memorial service June 11, 2006 and a head-stone to mark her life.

And she got somehting else too - a name.

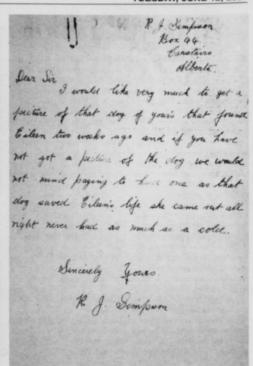

From then on, Baby Jane Doe is remembered as "May", the little girl who was given roots in Didsbury.

Eileen Simpson was two and half-years-old in 1935 when police dog Dale saved her life. The rescue was instrumental in the RCMP creating a national police dog service. Nearly 70 years later Eileen was rescued again by another RCMP canine hero. A letter written by Eileen Simpson's father in 1935 to thank Sgt. Cawsey and Dale for saving his child's life.

The miracle of Eileen Simpson

An amazing 70-year story book ended by separate RCMP police dog rescues

BY JOHNNIE BACHUSKY

Red Deer Express

When Audrey Redman heard about the construction of the new administration building at the Police Dog Service Training Centre in Innisfail, she sifted through her late father's old papers.

She came across a letter written to her father, John Cawsey, in 1935 by R.J. Simpson.

That year, Simpson's two and a half-year-old daughter Eileen was found by Cawsey, a sergeant in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP), after the child became lost when wandering away from her home near Carstairs.

The father had written to thank Cawsey. For many consecutive years after, the Simpson famisent Cawsey a photograph of Eileen as a token of their everlasting gratitude Audrey, a Calgary resident, had always wondered what became of Eileen, and this spring tracked down her sister Pearl Turner.

When Audrey telephoned Pearl she heard astonishing news that was nothing short of a miracle

'They found her again in Innisfail," Pearl told Audrey

Twice in Eileen Simpson's life - nearly 70 years apart, and at her most vulnerable moments - a RCMP police dog had saved her.

Eileen remembers her friend

In April, Audrey visited Eileen at a senior's residence in Calgary. Audrey would also meet Pearl and her sister Roberta McNees.

Before long Audrey and Eileen's sisters reconstructed the facts of the previous 70 years and realized there indeed had been a miracle in the life of Eileen

The sisters brought Audrey photographs. One was of the young Eileen. The other was a photograph of Dale, a German Shepherd once owned by John Cawsey, who served with the RCMP from 1932 to 1944. Cawsey previously served with the Alberta Provincial Police from 1917 to 1932 when the RCMP absorbed the provincial Eileen's memory was fading by last April, and her recollections with family members and friends were often disjointed.

However, she had no difficulty whatsoever in recognizing the picture of Dale, which she already had mounted on the wall of her room for the past several

"When she saw the picture she said, 'There's my dog," said Audrey.

Sgt. Cawsey rescues Eileen

Shortly after midnight on Aug. 18, 1935, Sgt. John Cawsey left the Calgary RCMP detachment with two constables and his canine partner Dale

They had received a call that a child by the name of Eileen Simpson was missing since 1:30 p.m. the previous day near Carstairs, and that up to 200 frantic locals were desperately trying to find her.

Along the way, the Mounties came across a parked car with a single occupant named R.A. Johnson.

The RCMP officers soon realized Johnson, and another man subsequently found in a nearby wheatfield by Dale, had been on a shoplifting spree in Red Deer the previous day.

Cawsey and his partners arrested the pair and took them back to Calgary. They immediately resumed their search for young Eileen.

The RCMP officers arrived at the Simpson farm early in the morning. Dale was given a scent of Eileen and shortly before 7 a.m. his tongue was motioning violently in the middle of a wheat field.

When Cawsey and his men arrived at the scene they found Dale licking the face of little Eileen who had crouched down with her head to the ground.

The child was taken to the house and treated. However, Eileen was just fine. In fact, officers noted she was talking "cheerfully" by the time they left to go back to Calgary

Young Eileen had just met her best friend in the

In 1933, John Cawsey first became interested in the use of dogs in police work. As a result of this interest he acquired Dale.

Two years later, the force purchased Dale, and together with his son Black Lux and a third shepherd named Sultan, they became the first recruits of the newly formed RCMP Dog Section.

Cawsey is credited with pioneering the use of police service dogs.

"It was because of him the commissioner of the day saw the worth, based on the (Eileen Simpson) case aid RCMP Insp. Lawrence Aimoe, who now heads the Police Dog Service Training Centre in Innisfail. In 1938, Cawsey was put in charge of the RCMP's dog training school in Calgary passed away on March 31, 1964 at Calgary.

He retired from the RCMP in 1944. During Cawsey's RCMP career he received two Commissioner's Commendations.

Today, largely due to Cawsey's trailblazing use of canines, the RCMP has more than 150 dog teams across the country.

Over the past seven decades, countless criminals have been arrested and the police dog program has saved scores and scores of people.

The Red Deer city RCMP detachment has two teams, with a third and fourth soon to be added. City RCMP Cpl. Doug Hawkes has been a dog handler since 1989

On Nov. 23, 2004 Hawkes was having a training session with his dog Kory when a call came in about a missing person in Innisfail.

The second miracle of Eileen Simpson was unfold-

Eileen receives second miracle

Hawkes and his partner Cpl. Mark McIntyre arrived at Innisfail's Country Lodge at about 11:20 p.m.

It was a wet and cold night with the temperature

They were told an elderly woman, suffering from dementia, had been missing since 6:30 p.m.

Hawkes and his canine partner Kory did a perimeter search immediately south of the building.

Kory was about 10 metres ahead of Hawkes when the officer spotted the senior lying in a ditch near a grassy area of a field. "She appeared very, very cold. She was clutching her purse. She was fully clothed," said Hawkes. "She had her arms wrapped up, holding her purse and trying to stay warm at the same time.' cane was lying on the ground nearby, leaving the RCMP officers to believe the woman had fallen but was unable to get back up.

It was only a few weeks ago that Hawkes learned that the woman was Eileen Simpson, who had been saved by Sgt. John Cawsey and his canine partner Dale by Sgt. John Cawsey almost 70 years earlier.

"It was quite the astounding story. It was amazing," said Hawkes.

The miracle of Eileen Simpson sent shock waves through the senior ranks of the RCMP.

There had been many incredible stories throughout the years about the heroics and accomplishments of the national agency's police dog program but nothing as amazing as someone being saved by a canine twice in a lifetime, almost 70 years apart.

The remarkable thing is that she was saved by police dogs twice in her life. It demonstrates how valuable these dogs are, especially for those who are vulnera-ble," said Aimoe. "In both cases I don't think there is any doubt that without the team involved Ms. Simpson would have perished."

The timing of the entire story could not have been more appropriate for RCMP dog handlers.

The new $2 million administration building at Innisfail's Police Dog Service Training Centre will be unveiled on June 20 during an invitation-only ceremo-

The RCMP wants the new building to be named after Sgt. John Cawsey

The plan to honour Sgt. Cawsey

"I think it is a great idea. He was the first dog handler. He basically developed our program to what it is today," said Cpl. Hawkes.

"It is quite amazing to where we have come over the

However, the final decision on the new building's name is now in the hands of Michael Fortier, federal minister of the Department of Public Works and Government Services Canada.

His ministry is responsible for the naming of all Government of Canada buildings. Anne Pratt, corporate communications manager for the ministry, will only say the RCMP name proposal is still under consideration.

Pratt said she couldn't say whether that decision will be made in time for the unveiling ceremony on June 20.

"We do have a responsibility to make sure the com-munity is involved," said Pratt. "And that is why this is taking time.

However, Red Deer MP Bob Mills, a long-time sup-porter of the Innisfail dog training centre, is promising to lobby on behalf on the RCMP for the new building to be named after Cawsey.

"Obviously I will look at the facts but it sounds rea-sonable to me," said Mills, who fought the Liberal fed-eral government a decade ago to make sure the training centre was not moved to B.C. "I will do the lobbying for them in Ottawa

Meanwhile, Audrey Redman and 40 other Cawsey family members will be at the Innisfail dog training centre on June 20.

They are honoured there is even a proposal to have the new administration building named after John Cawsey.

In the 50s, the Town of Bassano, where Cawsey once served, erected a statue of the police officer and his dog Dale. However, the statue was vandalized in the 80s and it has been sitting derelict in a town storage room for more than 20 years.

"We are a just so thrilled that after all these years he will be recognized," said Audrey.

Regardless of what the federal decision is, Audrey's joy, pride and faith, as well for thousands of others – especially for Eileen Simpson – will be undiminished by the awareness that miracles do
